CONTRIBUTORS

Pablo Adrián Arrocha Olabuenaga

Pablo Adrián Arrocha Olabuenaga holds a Law degree with Honours from the National Autonomous University of Mexico, a Master’s degree with Merit specializing in Public International Law from University College London, and a diploma from the Matías Romero Institute, the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Affairs’ Institute for Diplomatic Studies. He is a Public International Law professor at the LaSalle University (Mexico City) and a career diplomat who has been posted to the Permanent Mission of Mexico to the United Nations (New York) and to the Office of the Legal Adviser (Mexico City). He was a member of the Mexican Delegation to the International Court of Justice (2008), and was the Legal Adviser of the Mexican Delegation through the entire negotiation process of the Arms Trade Treaty. He currently serves as Adviser to the Under-Secretary for Multilateral Affairs and Human Rights at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Mexico City).

Sibylle Bauer

Sibylle Bauer is Director of the Dual-use and Arms Trade Control Programme at the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI). Before joining SIPRI in 2003, she was a Researcher with the Institute for European Studies (ULB) in Brussels. Sibylle Bauer has published widely on armaments-related issues. Recent publications include The Arms Trade Treaty: Challenges for the First Conference of States Parties (2014, with Paul Beijer and Mark Bromley) and Arms Trade Control Capacity Building: Lessons from Dual-use Trade Controls (2013). Since 2005, she has been involved in capacity-building to enhance transit, trans-shipment, brokering and export controls for dual-use items and arms.

Paul Beijer

Paul Beijer holds a degree in Economics and Business Administration from the Stockholm School of Economics and is a career foreign service officer. Currently Ambassador at the Swedish Ministry for Foreign Affairs (MFA) in Stockholm, he has been responsible for Sweden’s participation in the United Nations Arms Trade Treaty process since 2010, first as lead negotiator, then for Sweden’s ratification of the Treaty, and now for the continued process. During the period 1992 to 2001, he worked in different capacities in Sweden’s export control system, the final three years serving as Director of Export Controls in the Swedish MFA. He helped to set up the current Swedish licensing authority and has represented Sweden in the different international fora for export control cooperation.

Francesca Caonero

Francesca Caonero holds a Master’s degree in International Law from the University of Bologna (Italy) and an LLM in International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights in Armed Conflict from the Geneva Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights (Switzerland). In 2009, she was an associate researcher for the UN Institute for Disarmament Research (UNLIREC) project ‘Promoting Discussion on an Arms Trade Treaty’. From 2011 to 2013 she worked for UNLIREC overseeing the status of implementation of international disarmament and arms control treaties in Latin America and the Caribbean, as well as on issues relating to private security, maritime security and weapons of mass destruction.

Astrid Reisinger Coracini

Astrid Reisinger Coracini is a Lecturer at the University of Salzburg and Director of the Salzburg Law School on International Criminal Law, Humanitarian Law and Human Rights Law. Previous assignments include the New York University and the Institute of International Law and International Relations of the University of Graz. Astrid Reisinger Coracini was responsible for the development of an interdisciplinary master’s degree programme at the International Anti-Corruption Academy and served as Legal Officer at the Austrian Federal Ministry for Foreign Affairs. She holds a master and a doctorate degree in law. Her research focuses on sources of international law, international criminal law and the law of armed conflict.
Clare da Silva

Clare da Silva is a legal and policy consultant working in the areas of conventional arms control, armed violence reduction and international human rights law. She was the legal advisor on the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT) for Amnesty International from 2007 to 2014 and an advisor to the Nigerian delegation during the 2012 and 2013 United Nations Conferences on the ATT. She was a co-drafter of the UN Office on Drugs and Crime Model Law on the Firearms Protocol and has worked on UN projects addressing firearms trafficking and armed violence reduction. She also worked as a defence lawyer for four years at the Special Court for Sierra Leone. She was a Research Fellow at the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law (Cambridge University) from 2003 to 2005. She studied at the University of Toronto, and received her law degree from the University of Ottawa.

Eric Danon

Eric Danon holds a doctorate in Physics, and is a graduate of the French Ecole Nationale d’Administration and of the Institut d’Etudes Politiques de Paris. He joined the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in 1986 and has dedicated most of his diplomatic career to international security issues. Currently the chief executive officer of the Conseil Supérieur de la Formation et de la Recherche Stratégiques (High Council for Strategic Education and Research), Ambassador Eric Danon was appointed France’s Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva from 2008 to 2012; he led, in particular, the French delegation at the 2010 Review Conference on the Treaty on Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, as well as at the launch of the Arms Trade Treaty negotiations.

Peter Danssaert

Peter Danssaert obtained a degree in Political and Social Science and specialized in International Politics. He has worked with the International Peace Information Service since 1999. Peter Danssaert focuses on all matters related to the arms trade: legal as well as illegal trafficking, defence logistics, and many others. He has been a consultant for the Belgian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the European Commission, and the UN Panel of Experts on the Democratic Republic of Congo (2006, 2008 and 2009). He co-authored with Brian Wood the Study on the Development of a Framework for Improving End-Use and End-User Control Systems (2011) published by the United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs.

Roberto García Moritán

Roberto García Moritán has been a diplomatic Member of the Argentine Foreign Service since 1972. He has a Law degree, Master of Business Administration and Master of Arts in Political Science. He was ambassador to the United Nations in Geneva (1989-1993) and President of the Conference on Disarmament in 1992 and 2009. He was Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs in 2003-2005 and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in 2005-2008. His professional career, spanning nearly 40 years, has focused on international security issues and disarmament. He was the Chair of the UN Group of Experts on the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT) (2008), the Open Ended Working Group (2009 - 2011), and the Preparatory Committee of the Conference on the ATT (2010 - 2012) and was the President of the 2012 United Nations Conference on the ATT.

Claudio Gramizzi

Claudio Gramizzi, Senior Field Investigator with Conflict Armament Research, has worked as a researcher on weapons, control of arms flows and African armed conflicts for more than a decade. In addition to experience gathered while working with European non-governmental organizations such as GRIP (Groupe de recherche et d’information sur la paix) in Brussels and Safeworld in London, he served, between 2007 and 2011, as a consultant and arms expert on United Nations Security Council Panels of Experts in Côte d’Ivoire, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and the Sudan. Before joining Conflict Armament Research in 2014, he regularly cooperated with the Small Arms Survey Human Security Baseline Assessment programme on Sudan and South Sudan, contributing to several publications and to the Arms and Ammunition Tracing Desk project.
Björn Griebel

Björn Griebel studied Law in Mainz, Frankfurt, Speyer and Brussels, and holds a Doctorate in European and International Law. He works as a Legal Adviser for Germany’s Federal Office for Economic Affairs and Export Control (BAFA), where he is responsible for risk analysis and reporting. He is registered as an European Union (EU) expert on export control and gives lectures at various EU outreach events. His expertise lies in legal and procedural questions of export control, the legal implementations of ATT and EU requirements, inter-agency cooperation, risk management, reporting to the government and reporting to the public. Björn Griebel is a member of the ATT working group on reporting.

Tom Haeck

Tom Haeck holds a Master of National and International Public Law, a Master of Conflict and Development, and an Advanced Master (LLM) in International Humanitarian Law. He has held various positions in the private, academic and international sector, most recently as an Associate Human Rights Expert at the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

Paul Holtom

Paul Holtom is a Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for Trust, Peace and Social Relations, Coventry University (UK). Paul was previously the Director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) Arms Transfers Programme, and was the consultant for the 2013 Group of Governmental Experts on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms. Paul has authored numerous publications on the arms trade and peace and security, in particular the development of the Arms Trade Treaty and its implications for the international arms trade.

Atina Karim

Atina Karim is a data analyst at the Bangladesh-based consultancy firm, Somewhere In Net. Ltd. Her work entails collecting quantitative and qualitative data for research for the Norwegian Initiative on Small Arms Transfers project, managed by the Peace Research Institute Oslo. She has a BA (Hons) in International Relations with French from the University of Nottingham and is planning to pursue a graduate degree in a similar field.

Łukasz Korecki

Łukasz Korecki holds a legal M.A. degree summa cum laude from Warsaw University and a M.A. degree with distinction in International and European Legal Studies from Utrecht University. He has extensive experience in international criminal law and international humanitarian law. Since 2007, Łukasz Korecki has served as a legal officer in the Chambers Legal Support Section of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, providing advice to international judges at both trial and appellate level. He has also lectured in the field of international criminal law at universities in Italy, Poland and the Netherlands.

Elli Kytömäki

Elli Kytömäki is an Associate Fellow at Chatham House and a policy analyst working on the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT), export controls and nuclear non-proliferation. From 2009 to 2012, Elli Kytömäki was a Project Manager at the United Nations (UN) Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), where she was in charge of regional activities to support the ATT negotiations. Earlier in her career, she worked, inter alia, at the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Small Arms Survey, and the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. Elli Kytömäki has authored several articles and papers on the arms trade and the ATT.

Mike Lewis

Mike Lewis is a Lead Investigator for Conflict Armament Research, and an independent research consultant on arms, conflict and illicit financial flows. He previously served as a member of the United Nations Panel of Experts on the Sudan, investigating violations of the UN Security Council’s arms embargo on Darfur and its prohibition of military aviation activities. He has also worked as Amnesty International’s Military/Police and Arms Control Researcher, as a humanitarian Policy Adviser for Oxfam, and as a Policy Specialist on tax and development for the international NGO federation ActionAid.
Cristiane Lucena Carneiro

Cristiane Lucena Carneiro holds a PhD in Politics (New York University). She is an Assistant Professor at the International Relations Institute, University of São Paulo, and has experience in the areas of compliance, regime design, and human rights. Her current research investigates the impact of institutional complexity on compliance with international legal commitments, with a particular focus on the Inter-American human rights regime. She is also interested in institutional design, with an emphasis on the role of flexibility in treaty commitments. She teaches courses in international relations, human rights, and international law. Cristiane has published on alternative dispute resolution in the WTO, international regime design, and economic sanctions and human rights.

Rosella Mangion

Rosella Mangion is Legal Officer with the Office of Legal Affairs of the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL), working in the area of illicit trade and counterfeiting. Before joining INTERPOL, Rosella Mangion was a solicitor for the New South Wales Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (ODPP), Australia, responsible for prosecuting serious criminal offences and appearing for the crown at trial, sentence and appeal proceedings. Prior to the ODPP, she worked as an in-house solicitor for the Australian Department of Finance and Deregulation in the Ministerial and Parliamentary Services Division. Ms Mangion has an LLB and BA, as well as an Honours degree in Latin, all from the University of Sydney, Australia.

Nicholas Marsh

Nicholas Marsh is a Research Fellow at the Peace Research Institute Oslo (PRIO), where he runs a unique database project that tracks and visualizes the international trade in small arms and light weapons. He has been the Chair of a European research network on small arms, is a consultant to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and to the Small Arms Survey, and is a founding member of the Small Arms Data Observatory. At PRIO, he has written articles, chapters and reports on the acquisition and use of weapons by non-state groups, the global licit and illicit trade in conventional arms, lethal autonomous weapons, and national and international laws and regulations governing arms transfers.

Armando Meneses Larios

Armando Meneses Larios holds a Bachelor’s degree in Law from the National Autonomous University of Mexico, and a Master’s degree in Law in International Legal Studies with a specialization in human rights and international humanitarian law from the Washington College of Law of the American University in the USA. For six years, he was regional adviser to the International Committee of the Red Cross for Mexico, Central America, and Cuba, giving legal advice on, amongst other subjects, weapons and international humanitarian law. He has lectured on these topics at many conferences. Today, he works at the Human Rights Commission of Mexico.

Penelope Nevill

Penelope Nevill is a barrister in London, specializing in public international law and related areas of public law, European Union (EU) law and commercial law. She began her legal career in Auckland, New Zealand, as a litigation lawyer at Chapman Tripp, before moving to Cambridge in 2001 for her LLM. After completing her studies, Penelope worked first as Research Assistant for Sir Elihu Lauterpacht QC, James Crawford SC and Sir Daniel Bethlehem QC before being appointed to a Fellowship at Downing College and the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law. In Cambridge, Penelope taught international and EU law, moving to the bar in 2010. She has appeared before the International Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights. Most recently, she was one of the United Kingdom’s counsel in Mauritius v UK, at the Permanent Court of Arbitration. Penelope continues to lecture part-time at the University of Cambridge (Law of Armed Conflict) and the University of Auckland (International Dispute Resolution), and at undergraduate and post-graduate courses in public international law at King’s College London.
Rodrigo Pintado

Rodrigo Pintado is the Chief of Staff of Mexico’s Vice Minister for Multilateral Affairs and Human Rights. In 2012-2013, he was a member of Mexico’s negotiating team for the Arms Trade Treaty negotiations. From 2008 to 2013, he served in the Permanent Mission of Mexico to the United Nations, where he was in charge of disarmament, arms controls and political affairs.

Thomas Wayde Pittman

Thomas Wayde Pittman holds a Juris Doctor degree with distinction from the University of Nebraska and an LLM degree cum laude in Public International Law from Leiden University. He has extensive experience as a criminal prosecutor, and served as a military judge in the European Judicial Circuit of the United States Air Force. Since 2005, Mr. Pittman has been employed by the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia in the Chambers Legal Support Section at the pre-trial, trial and appellate levels. As a senior legal officer, he supervises the research and drafting of decisions, orders and judgements, and provides advice to international judges on issues of international humanitarian law and international criminal law and procedure. He was also a senior lecturer for Hague University’s LLB programme from 2009-2014.

Guy Pollard

Guy Pollard is the United Kingdom (UK) Deputy Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva. Guy joined the British Diplomatic Service in 1991 and from 1995 to 2003 he served in Pakistan and Slovakia. In 2004, he was posted to the UK Disarmament Delegation in Geneva. Since that time he has been involved in the Conference on Disarmament, the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and negotiations of protocols on anti-vehicle mines and cluster munitions in the context of the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons and the Convention Cluster Munitions. Guy Pollard is at the forefront of UK policy on the Arms Trade Treaty, authoring the resolutions establishing the ATT process and the two Diplomatic Conferences. He was seconded to the President’s Team for the Final United Nations Conference on the Arms Trade Treaty where he played a key role in negotiating and drafting the final treaty text. In addition, Guy is the UK expert to the UN Conventional Arms Register review process. In 2012 Guy was awarded the MBE (Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) for services to humanitarian arms control and the Arms Trade Treaty.

Edmond Seay

Edmond Seay served in the American Foreign Service for 26 years. From 2008 to 2011 he was arms control adviser at the US Mission to NATO. Before that, he was seconded to the Secretariat of the Wassenaar Arrangement in Vienna from 2005 to 2008. Prior postings included Slovenia (1998-2001) as liaison to the International Trust Fund for Demining; State EUR/RPM (1996-1998), negotiating compliance with the Dayton Peace Accords; and State PM/SPN (1994-1996), where he helped draft Dayton's disarmament annex. Edmond Seay joined the State Department in 1985. He holds a Bachelor of Arts (Political Science) from the University of California, Berkeley, and a Master of Science (Strategic Intelligence) from the Joint Military Intelligence College. He has been published by Arms Control Today.

Joël Sollier

Joël Sollier is General Counsel at the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) and Acting Special Representative of INTERPOL to the United Nations. Before joining INTERPOL in 2008, Joël Sollier was Chief of Unit for the UN Security Council’s Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate in New York for five years. Formerly, he was magistrate at the French Embassy in Vietnam responsible for legal and judicial cooperation between France and South East Asian countries, magistrate at the Directorate of European and International Affairs of the Ministry of Justice, Paris, responsible for negotiations on terrorism, organized crime, corruption and money-laundering, and magistrate at the Court of Versailles, Prosecution Office in Economic and Financial Crimes.
Fiona Southward

Fiona Southward is a graduate of law from the universities of Glasgow (LLB) and Essex (LLM). She holds a first class bachelor’s degree (LLB) with a focus on public international law and a master’s degree with distinction in International Human Rights and Humanitarian Law (LLM). She trained and worked as an asylum solicitor in Glasgow, Scotland. Her research background includes work on the applicability of international humanitarian and criminal law to natural resource exploitation during armed conflict, the implications of resource scarcity for human rights protection and realization, and the legality of means and methods of warfare involving depleted uranium munitions. She is currently a researcher with the Belgium-based International Peace Information Service.

Diego Valadares Vasconcelos Neto

Diego Valadares Vasconcelos Neto is a consultant to UNESCO in a joint project with the Presidency of the Republic of Brazil Human Rights Secretariat. He has lectured on international humanitarian law and international human rights law in Brazil and Belarus, and has served as human rights specialist for governmental and international organizations. He is a PhD candidate in Political Science at the Federal University of Minas Gerais (UFMG), holds a Master’s degree from the Geneva Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights, and a Bachelor of Law from UFMG. He participated in negotiations during the 2008 Dublin Conference that adopted the Cluster Munitions Convention.

Mubarak Waseem

Mubarak Waseem holds an LLB with First Class honours from King’s College London (2014). He is a Research Assistant to Penelope Nevill (20 Essex Street Chambers), Prabha Kotiswaran (King’s College London) and the King’s College London Transnational Law Institute. He researches a wide variety of issues in public international law, international investment law and international criminal law. Mubarak was a member of the King’s College London Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition team, where he reached the international semi-finals, winning fourth best oralist internationally and a team award for the tenth best written pleadings of the competition (2014). He holds a full merit-based scholarship to study an LLM in International Dispute Resolution at King’s College London (2015-2016).

Anne-Charlotte Merrell Wetterwik

Anne-Charlotte Merrell Wetterwik is a Senior Research Associate at the Center for International Trade and Security at the University of Georgia, a position she has held since 2005. She specializes in questions related to national strategic trade management evaluations, outreach and training, legislative drafting, assistance to industry, conventional arms trade control and the European Union (EU). She has also worked as a Swedish diplomat, and has extensive experience in international negotiations on EU trade control matters and the multilateral export control regimes. She has authored several in-depth analytical reports on national strategic trade control standards as well as on challenging issues in the field of nonproliferation and arms control, including several reports on topics related to the Arms Trade Treaty. She has lived and worked in Belgium, the United Kingdom and the Russian Federation. Anne-Charlotte Merrell Wetterwik is a graduate of Uppsala University, Sweden.

Andrew Wood

Andrew Wood joined Rolls-Royce in 2009 after ten years as the United Kingdom (UK) Ministry of Defence Head of Export Control Policy, Counter Proliferation and Arms Control, and after a 28-year career in the UK government spanning areas such as NATO policy, defence project management and procurement policy. He was involved in the United Nations Arms Trade Treaty (ATT) process from inception to adoption of the Treaty in 2013, and was present in formal and informal consultations and negotiations on the development of the ATT. This included being a member of the Group of Governmental Experts in 2008, a delegate at the Open Ended Working Group in 2009-10, and participating in the Preparatory meetings in 2011-12 and both UN Conferences on the ATT in 2012 and 2013 as a member of the UK government delegation.
Brian Wood

Brian Wood is head of Amnesty International’s research and policy on arms control and human rights. In the mid-1990s he initiated proposals with Nobel Peace Laureates for what has become the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT), and attended all the United Nations (UN) preparatory meetings and the two negotiating conferences. After the Treaty was passed, he took sabbatical leave to manage a UN-funded project on digital learning about the ATT. In 1999 he co-wrote, with Johan Peleman, “The Arms Fixers: controlling the Brokers and Shipping Agents”, the first detailed study of arms brokering (sponsored by the Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs). Later he served as consultant to the UN Group of Government Experts on the prevention of illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons. He has twice addressed the UN Security Council to propose measures to strengthen the design and implementation of UN arms embargoes, and co-authored a study for improving end use and end user control systems, published in 2011 by the UN Office for Disarmament Affairs. He has researched issues relating to weapons and policing more widely, designing proposals for the European Union regulations to prevent trade in equipment used for torture. He studied economics and sociology at Rhodes University in South Africa and at the London School of Economics and Political Science.

Peter Woolcott

Peter Woolcott joined the Department of Foreign Affairs in Australia in 1981 after practising as a barrister in Sydney for a number of years. He served in Australian diplomatic missions in Jamaica (1981-83), Argentina (1987-88), and the Philippines as Deputy Chief of Mission (1994-97); was Consul-General in Honolulu and representative to United States Pacific Command (1998-2001), Deputy Head of Mission in Jakarta (2001-2002), Chief of Staff to the Minister for Foreign Affairs (2002-04), and Australian Ambassador to Italy (2004-07). Woolcott also sat on the Executive Board of the World Food Programme (2004-07). Between 2007 and 2009 he was First Assistant Secretary of the South East Asia Division in the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade and in 2009 he became the Department’s People Smuggling envoy. He most recently served as Australia’s Permanent Representative to the United Nations in Geneva and Ambassador for Disarmament Affairs. He has researched issues relating to weapons and policing more widely, designing proposals for the European Union regulations to prevent trade in equipment used for torture. He studied economics and sociology at Rhodes University in South Africa and at the London School of Economics and Political Science.

William T. Worster

William T. Worster is a Lecturer in International Law at The Hague University of Applied Sciences in The Hague, The Netherlands, where he teaches Public International Law, International Criminal Law, Law of International Organizations and International Dispute Settlement. He received his JD from Chicago-Kent College of Law in Chicago, Illinois and his LLM in Public International Law from Leiden University in Leiden, The Netherlands. Previously, he served in a variety of positions in the US government, the United Nations and private practice, covering areas of law ranging from international criminal law to international corporate law, and international migration law.

Zeray Yihdego

Zeray Yihdego is a Senior Lecturer in Public International Law at the University of Aberdeen Law School, United Kingdom, where he teaches international law, humanitarian law, international criminal law and WTO/GATT law at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. He holds PhD and LLM degrees in public international law from Durham and Cambridge Universities respectively. He is the author of The Arms Trade and International Law (Hart Publishing, 2007), and has published many articles and chapters in academic journals and books on the arms trade, international humanitarian law, peace and security, African governance, human rights, and sustainable development. Zeray Yihdego is a member of the United Nations (UN) Expert Group on the regulation of firearms and acts as a consultant to the UN Office on Drugs and Crime.